Why study history? We explore the past, in all its diversity and complexity, because it is a vital way to understand the world we live in and how it came to be. The 21st century is a complicated place. Change comes fast and happens continually. Historians delve into cause and effect, investigate change and constancy, and examine human agency. Far from being just about memorizing “names and dates,” the skills and tools we use in studying the past can also help us to make sense of our rapidly changing world and to find our place within it. Knowing our history is about knowing ourselves!

The history department offers graduate coursework in United States, European, and World history. Our award-winning faculty's wide-ranging topical expertise includes labor history, women's and gender history, the history of violence, environmental history, the history of science and technology, and the history of capitalism. Our curriculum incorporates professional development and career exploration opportunities for all master's and doctoral students, both inside and outside of education and academia.

Graduate education in history prepares students for diverse careers such as teaching positions at the secondary, community college, or university levels; government research positions; management of archival resources or historical agencies; and museums and other public history careers. Our graduate programs also provide sufficient flexibility to serve the needs of students with career goals where an understanding of history is crucial (such as law or journalism) or useful (such as banking, criminal justice, social work, research, public policy, or publishing). We also welcome those who simply have an avocational interest in acquiring advanced knowledge of history.

Degree programs

1. The M.A. in History is an academic degree for students who want to seek employment in government jobs within the state department or intelligence field, teach history at the secondary school level, who are considering pursuing a doctorate, who want to conduct independent research, or who are lifelong learners with an interest in historical scholarship. The M.A. in History degree is also offered in an all-online format.
2. The M.A. in Public History (MAPH) is a professional degree for students seeking careers in museums, at historical societies or historic sites, in cultural resource management, in nonprofits, in government agencies, and in allied fields. It is also appropriate for secondary school teachers who seek to gain experience in project-based, community-engaged pedagogy.
3. The Ph.D. in History is an academic degree and the culmination of a historian's academic training. Our doctoral program prepares students professionally for both academic and non-academic careers, with an emphasis on career diversity.
4. The World History Bridge Certificate provides a graduate-level credential in world history, an area of growing demand at both the secondary and post-secondary levels of education. The certificate program is especially suitable for history and social studies teachers and teachers in training.
5. The M.A./J.D joint degree leads to a simultaneous receipt of an M.A. from the Department of History and a J.D. from the Law School. Students must be accepted to the Law School before they may apply to the M.A. in History.
6. The M.A./M.L.I.S. joint degree leads to a simultaneous receipt of an M.A. from the Department of History and an M.L.I.S. from the School of Information Science. Students may either apply simultaneously to the M.A. and M.L.I.S. programs or apply to one program and, after acceptance, apply to the other.
7. The MAPH/M.L.I.S. joint degree leads to a simultaneous receipt of an M.A. in Public History from the Department of History and an M.L.I.S. from the School of Information Science. Students may either apply simultaneously to the M.A. and M.L.I.S. programs or apply to one program and, after acceptance, apply to the other.

Restriction(s): Enrollment is limited to Graduate level students.

HIS 6540 Jane Austen's World Cr. 3

Jane Austen's novels have generated great—and well deserved—interest in the world she inhabited. Austen wrote during one of the most turbulent periods of British and World history. This class will place her writings into a historical and cultural context. Over the course of the semester we will address a number of questions that shaped Austen's era and resonate for our own: How does her work interpret and reflect changing views of love and family? How do they reflect rising consumer capitalism and new styles of fashion? What do they say about women's rights to property? About the Napoleonic Wars and the British slave trade? How can novels help us understand the conflicts of an era? Our course will deepen our understanding of British, and global, society and culture. Offered Every Other Year.

HIS 6550 Readings in Shakespeare's England: Renaissance, Reformation, Revolution Cr. 4

The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries in English history are often looked upon as a cultural "golden age"—the days of King Henry VIII, Queen Elizabeth, William Shakespeare, Francis Drake, Walter Raleigh, Isaac Newton, and other larger-than-life figures. In fact, for those living through this "early modern period," it was also a time of great uncertainty, upheaval, and even violence. This class will explore the key events, issues, and personalities of this tumultuous era. We will focus in particular on the Protestant Reformation, and on the clash between the monarchy and Parliament over how much power a king should command. We'll also examine the lives of everyday Englishmen and women, the age of exploration and colonization in the New World, and important cultural developments such as the rise of Shakespearean theater and the Scientific Revolution. The events, conflicts, settlements, and innovations of early modern England continue to shape our world. Offered Every Other Year.

Restriction(s): Enrollment is limited to Graduate level students.

HIS 6780 Introduction to Records and Information Management Cr. 3

Management of information, including records creation, records inventory and appraisal, retention/disposition scheduling, filing systems, maintenance of inactive records, micrographics, vital records protection, and electronic impact on records management.
