

JOURNALISM AND MEDIA (B.A.)

The Journalism and Media major prepares students to report, produce, and share stories that inform and engage diverse audiences in a rapidly changing media environment. Students learn how to gather and verify information, interview effectively, and craft compelling narratives across digital, broadcast, and print platforms. Coursework emphasizes beat and feature reporting, multimedia storytelling, data and solutions journalism, and ethical communication practices. Students also explore how emerging technologies—such as artificial intelligence, audience analytics, and social media algorithms—are reshaping the creation and consumption of news. Through hands-on projects, newsroom simulations, and internships, they gain the practical experience and critical perspective needed to navigate today's complex information landscape.

In addition to the course work below, students must complete all of the department's general degree requirements (<https://bulletins.wayne.edu/undergraduate/college-fine-performing-communication-arts/communication/ba-requirements/>).

All Journalism and Media majors must complete the following:
